

Biography

'That Rock Guy'

'That Rock Guy' is one of the hardest working touring musicians in the world, performing over 1000+ live shows in the last three years. Playing energized melodic rock, the rock singer, guitarist, songwriter and producer tours the world performing no-frills rock to the masses.

"He's simply a brilliant performer, a guitar guru ... the night he played 'The Village' was just incredible. I'll never forget it" – John Proom, AOA Radio, 2015.

Currently on the final leg of an unprecedented three-year worldwide tour, 'That Rock Guy' has previously toured with The Alan Barnes Band who opened for Bon Jovi on the 'Sleep When I'm Dead' tour. He also performed the guitar duties on XL's self-titled album, produced by gold record recipient Andy Shanahan from classic Oz Rock band Roxus.

As a prolific writer, the new album released on the AOR Heaven label titled "Nothin' To Lose" features 10 new melodic hard rock tracks and new music videos.

The new album also features an album video promo showcasing eight of the new tracks and the also first two singles 'Through The Night' and 'Can't Get Enough Of You' are available to view as music videos and also as lyric videos:
